MRS. KELLY'S CAPTIVITY.

[From Harper's Weekly.]

But he, among the news of the day is a story of an Indian capture which is the counterpart of the older tale. On an evening in July, 1864, Mrs. Kelly, with her husband and four other men, and a little fair-haired niece of seven years, were encamped near the Black Hills, on their way from Kansas to Idaho. A party of Indians swept down upon them, and Mrs. Kelly and her niece were left alone and captive in their hands. Then came the rough and torturing flight, intent upon saving her darling's life, Mrs. Kelly dropped bits of paper along the way, and told the child that they would serve as a clue to return to the main trail. The child slipped from her horse to follow the clue, and then disappeared. Mrs. Kelly followed her, and was retaken. The savages pursued the child, who at length saw soldiers. At the same moment the soldiers saw the pursuing Indians and paused.
The deadly arrows sped, and months afterward Mrs. Kelly saw the scalp of fair hair, and knew the young child's fate. On the terrible journey her life was constantly threatened. She was bound to a tree to be burned. She was to be tied to a horse and sent galloping into the desert. But the fate did not fall, and gradually the Indians became more friendly, and a Sioux chief, Jumping Bear, was her confessed lover. She unfolded to him the Christian ethics of marriage, and the shaggy chief acquiesced—a twangy Major Dobbin of the prairie. She began to learn the Indian language, to teach, and to sing. The Indians listened and were pleased, and were sorry for their ill treatment of her.
The women also were kind; but they were vain and dirty. "They are human nature in a savage state."

Her husband, meanwhile, was busily seeking to find her, and the Indians perceiving the great interest that was felt in her behalf, decided that they must meet craft with craft. They concluded to send word to Fort Sully that on a certain day they would bring the white squaw to restore her. They would then in full force escort her within the stockade, and massacre the garrison. To save the garrison at Fort Sully was now the aim of Mrs. Kelly. She turned to Jumping Bear, and told him that she was now enamored of Indian life, and would never leave it, but that she wished to send one last message to her friends, and asked him to carry a note to Fort Sully, saying that undoubtedly her husband was now dead, and that no one would ever love her so dearly again—which was certainly under the circumstances, human nature in a civilized state. Jumping Bear, faithful and eager, departed. He delivered the letter, which put Sully on his guard. Two thousand Indians presently appeared before it with their captives. The garrison with shotgun awaited them, and the commandant requested a dozen Indians to approach with the captives. They entered the fort with her. The gate was closed. The guns were run out, and the Indians ran away. Congress subsequently voted Mrs. Kelly five thousand dollars, and she has now a place in the pension office. The other day, when the Sioux delegation came to Washington, she met it in a friendly manner, and one of the chief men wept that she would not return with them to the wilderness. She speaks very kindly of them. To a question whether they would not abuse her if they had her again in their power, she answered that much of the Indian cruelty must be attributed to the injustice and cruelty of the whites.
"And one reason you can not believe an Indian, is that the Indian has learned that he can not believe a white man." However that may be, Mrs. Kelly has proved that she can truly say to the Indians in the words of Mrs. O'Flaherty to her husband, "Come on! I'm able for ye."

The New York Tribune says: The small, but steady business in gold mining in the Southern States will receive an impetus as soon as a machine which has lately been perfected in this city becomes generally introduced. It crushes into a powder as fine as the sand of the sea shore and then separates the bits of metal from the powdered stone by a peculiar process of shaking and blowing. The cheapness of the apparatus, compared with the cost of a stamp mill, and its efficiency in operation will permit the ores of the south and other sections to be worked at excellent profit.
People from the West and South and from Peru are investigating the capability of the invention.

The "Fifth Duchess of Hillhurst" is the name of a short-horned cow which was lately sold in England for the sum of $22,500. She is described as a "charming creature." The "Duchess of Geneva," which was sold two or three years ago in New York State, brought $36,750, which is believed to be the largest sum ever paid for a cow.

Last week a series of robberies were committed in the vicinity of Polk, Geary and O'Farrell streets, four or five houses being entered and money stolen from each. The robberies were committed within a few days of each other, and four of the houses were entered in the daytime. One house was entered twice in the same evening. The booty secured amounted to about $1,500. The smallest amount taken was about $50, and the largest about $600. It is thought that the gang is composed of criminals lately arrived. The jobs were evidently done by the same hand, and bear all the marks of skill and experience in the business.
Four young fellows have thus far been arrested upon suspicion that they were concerned in the burglaries. Another one whom the officers were after escaped. The boldness of the burglaries were remarkable. The burglars entered one of the houses a second time, after an alarm had been given and the police notified. A butcher's shop was also entered, the spring lock having been ingeniously opened, and the inner lock forced. But only a small amount of loose change was obtained. Two of the persons arrested on suspicion are known to be the most expert thieves and burglars in the city, yet they are not over eighteen years old. They are hoodlums, pure and simple, rejoicing in the black coat and black felt hat which seem to be a kind of uniform with them. Their faces are extremely youthful, but the expression denotes the hardening effect of a life of crime. These burglaries are among the most remarkable committed for some time, being executed with startling boldness, and being eminently successful as far as plunder is concerned.
Only coin was taken, and the burglars seemed to know where it was.—[S. F.
Bulletin.]

A PERILOUS RIDE.—When the Missouri, Kansas and Texas train arrived at the Garrison House last night and came to a standstill, a man crawled from under one of the coaches, where he had been stealing a ride on the brake car.
He gave his name as Sam King, and said he had ridden all the way from Parsons, Kansas, in that position. He said he had gone to Texas from Illinois about four months ago, taking with him $500, and expected to go into business at Waco. But on the road down he was set upon by tramps, who knocked him down and took all the money he had, leaving him, as they supposed, in a dying condition by the roadside. He recovered sufficiently to crawl to a farmhouse close by, where he laid for about a month, oblivious to all that was going on around him. When he recovered his strength he worked on the farm until about two weeks ago for his board, and then hearing that his wife was in a dying condition at home, he took all his worldly possessions and started to go to her. He arrived at Parsons, Kansas, yesterday, and when the passenger train came along he watched his opportunity to get under the coach and ride to this city. Just as soon as he could conveniently, he crawled under one of the Pacific coaches, which was standing on the main track, and took his seat on the brake-car, intending to ride to St. Louis. He said he never felt the slightest fear while riding in his perilous position whatever. The last seen of him he was riding on the brake-car as unconcerned as you please, and seemed to enjoy himself very well on his uncomfortable seat.—[Sedalia (Mo.) Bazoo.]

PLYMOUTH, (Mass.), October 4.—An adventure so singular in its character happened to a citizen of this town this morning that, without the knowledge of the parties and the evidence of those near, it would be set down as a Munchausen tale. Mr. D. Finney, with his neighbor, Angel Bartlett, were off Gun-ner's Point, South Plymouth, coast shooting. They were in separate dories, as far apart as boats usually are in that sport, when a humpback whale rose some distance off and spouted. He rose again nearer the boat, and Mr. Finney thought, by the direction he was taking, that the next time he came up he would come ahead of the boat, and he would give him a shot. While waiting for him to come up, kneeling in the bottom of the dory, he felt a shock, and, as he expressed it, found himself on the whale's back dry shod. The next thing he knew he went down and came up on the other side of the boat. Probably the whale sank when he found he had a rider, and drew the man with him. When he came up he was near Mr. Bartlett's dory, and was taken into his boat. Throughout the whole he had held on to his gun, and brought it on board with him.—[Boston Herald.]

A Kentucky editor, going off on a visit, left his paper in charge of a minister. During the minister's stay in the sanctum, the following letter came from a mountain subscriber: "You know d—d well I paid my subscription the last time I was in Lexington. If I get any more such letters from you as I received last week I will come down and man-h—l out of you." The minister answered:
"I have been trying to mail that thing out of the editor for ten years; and if you will really come down and mail it out of him, then, my dear sir, I have twenty members of my church I will also get you to operate on."

In the finance accounts just printed, a statement is given of the amount of "conscience money" remitted to the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the year ended the 31st of March. The amount was £14,823 4s 3d. The Postmaster-General of Ireland received £12.

A KENTUCKY JUDGE'S CONFESSION.— The Cincinnati Gazette prints a telegram from Vancosburg, Kentucky, which says: "Our criminal court was opened by Judge Sands in a creditable style, as reported through your paper, but no business was transacted, because Judge Sands failed to sustain his judicial and personal dignity. There was much bad feeling manifested at one time toward this young and gifted judge, until he came into court and said: Gentlemen and fellow citizens: I appear before you to say I am a victim to a vice which has disgraced me before you and my country.
As I entered this court room I heard some one say: 'There goes pretty timber to make a criminal judge of.' I feel that remark as steel through my heart, for it is just. I am unworthy of the high honor and trust you have conferred upon one so young, and I return to you the office I have lost, being unworthy of it.
Pardon me, friends and countrymen, but you shall bear this no longer. My judicial integrity and official acts are blameless. Thank God! I am no longer criminal judge of Lewis county. May heaven keep me in my affliction! So eloquent and feeling an appeal was never heard before. Prejudice was turned to sympathy, and sympathy to compassion, for Judge Sands. He has a warm place in our hearts, and we hope he will return to us reformed."
